SEVEN ARMY FLIERS KILLED

Two Planes Fall During Storms In Southern
Ohio Areas

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, May 17.—Two army planes, caught in a sudden violent wind and rainstorm, carried seven men to their death in crashes nearly 100 miles apart in southern Ohio last night.

Three bodies, not immediately identified, were taken from the scattered wreckage of a plane which struck a hillside eight miles north of Nelsonville, and two air corps captains died as their ship plunged into the ground with great force 10 miles south of Wilmington.

Major J. W. Sessums, Wright field adjutant, identified the victims in the Wilmington crash as Capt. R. A. VonDearu of Dayton and Capt. John C. Stanley. Both were stationed at Washington and were en route to Dayton in an advanced training ship, he said.

The bodies of VonDearu and Stanley, which remained in the wreckage until an investigating party arrived from Wright field at midnight, were taken to Patterson field, Dayton, in an ambulance.

Sergt. E. B. Webb of the state highway patrol said the plane's motor was buried deep in the earth and that it probably plunged to the ground at high speed.

Witnesses said the plane which crashed near Nelsonville cut a 100-yard swath through trees and brush down a hillside. Residents of the nearby village of Carson Hill said they heard it circling in an apparent search for a place to land for a half-hour before the accident.

Sealed orders found in a metal container were turned over to Sheriff Lloyd Duffy of Hocking county to await inspection by army officials. Other clues to the identification of the plane or its occupants were lacking.

The Nelsonville crash occurred at 8:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) and the Wilmington crash 15 minutes later.

were appointed co-chairmen of the committee which will make plans for an apple festival in Salem Oct.

Halifax Talks with Hull
On Nazi Invasion
Of Syria

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The 21
American republics today prepared to establish "provisional administration" over French colonies in the Americas, it was learned authoritatively, if the forecast close "collaboration" between Germany and France should be projected into the western hemisphere.

Await Clarification

Any decisive action, however, will be delayed, it was said, pending clarification of the degree of the Vichy government's cooperation in setting up the Nazis' "new order" in Europe.

The United States and the other American nations are fully aware of the dangerous potentialities of a Nazi foothold on this side of the Atlantic, authoritative sources declared, and complete plans have been prepared to act whenever necessary to protect the peace and security of the American continent.

Viscount Halifax, the British em-bassador, conferred late yesterday with Secretary Hull on new developments in the international situation arising from the Nazi-Vichy pact, including mention of the future status of French possessions in this hemisphere. Informal quarters said, however, that the Hull-Halifax discussions revolved particularly around swiftly-paced developments in Syria where the first trial of German-French collaboration was reported under way.

Agree On Arrangements

Arrangements for establishing provisional administrations for French, British or Dutch possessions in the western hemisphere if their status were threatened by developments in the war were agreed upon at the inter-American conference in Havana.

That conference adopted a resolution which proclaimed that "the American republics would regard any transfer, or attempted transfer, of the sovereignty, jurisdiction, possession or other interest in or control over any such region (in this continent) to another non-American state as inimical to their peace, safety and political independence."

To carry out that pronouncement the Havana conference designated an inter-American committee empowered to establish temporary administration over European colonies —to end when normal conditions were restored.

European colonies which would fall in the category, it was said, include:

French: Martinique, French Guiana, Guadeloupe, St. Pierre and Miquelon, and Clipperton Island.

British: Bermuda, Bahamas, Jamaica, Leeward Islands, Windward Islands, Barbados, Trinidad, British Honduras, and British Guiana.

Dutch: Guiana, Curacao, and Aruba.

ORGANIZED LABOR ON THE SPOT

The government in Washington and the leaders of organized labor throughout the country know what people are saying about work stoppages and threats of stoppages in industries producing for national defense.

They are saying that work stoppages are contrary to public policy. Their opinion in the matter is backed up by the government's own attempts to avert stoppages. Many feel that the government should go farther than it has gone so far. Its position is not clear.

They go so far as to say, in some cases, that the government should assume the power to conscript labor for national defense, thus putting labor on the same level relative to government as selectees in training camps. That would be a radical step.

There is more support for the opinion that President Roosevelt should declare publicly that he and his government are opposed to work stoppages, thus clarifying the official position. Thereafter, organized labor could decide whether to defy the government, or whether to modify its position on strikes affecting national defense production.

It seems plain that whatever is done or isn't done, organized labor has let itself be placed on a spot. If organized employers were to use their collective power to impede defense production, it can be imagined that public opinion would not let them evade the consequences of such action. It is a risk that neither employers nor employees, acting as an organized minority, can take without sober contemplation of the consequences.

An unequivocal statement by the President would help labor leaders acting in good faith to avert work stoppages. The government cannot expect labor officials to relieve it of the responsibility for national leadership. The country has waited for Mr. Roosevelt to take this step. It has been patient. It has tried to make the best of a series of bad situations. It still would welcome a forthright declaration by the chief executive that work stoppages are against public policy in the defense production drive.

ECLIPSE

There was a minimum of interest in the first regular session of the 94th general assembly. At no time did Ohio seem to be following legislative events in Columbus closely. Indeed, most of the time the state didn't even know what the representatives and senators were doing. It merely assumed things were being taken care of properly.

The observation is not meant as a criticism of the members of the assembly, who probably are no worse and may be a little better than average. It is, however, by way of being a kind of standard comment on legislative bodies in general, and state legislative bodies in particular. The national congress has been put into eclipse by the same trend toward executive authority in government that has overshadowed state legislatures.

While there is nothing new about emphasis on executive power, which embittered legislators during the World war period and, before that, in the Civil war, the trend this time seems to have gone farther than ever before. This time it not only is accepted that legislators, lacking executive will, should play second fiddle while important decisions are being made, but also is being pointed out that this relationship may be expected to continue indefinitely. There is no prospect of any revival of the sleepy days when debaters could bumble drowsily for hours on end while the world waited for them to run out of breath.

That does not argue against the necessity of free legislatures. If representative democracy can ignore its lawmakers, confident of their integrity and ultimate wisdom, that is a sign they must have done their work well in the past and can be expected to do it just as well in the future. It is that part of the government machinery which operates best when it can operate most deliberately.

FRANCE IS NOT A STATE

The fairy tale of free France hasn't commanded a respectful audience in the United States. It has been tolerated only because the story tellers didn't go too far at any one point.

The turning point in tolerance is reached with the absurd figment that free France now is deciding to throw in its lot with Germany. That is supposed to be a sign of French confidence in the reich.

Americans do not believe what is left of France has any freedom of choice. The only bargaining power it ever possessed was the remnants of its navy, now controlled by pro-Nazi Admiral Darlan. The army in Syria might have been a factor, but apparently it either has disintegrated or is under Nazi control.

The Germans were clever enough to see the possibilities in a puppet state maintained in the name of France. But France, the real France, disappeared last June when its integrity and power were destroyed by Germany. Since then France has not existed, save as a name cloaking decisions made in Germany and marketed through the mouths of figureheads in Vichy. Earnest as some of the figureheads may have been, the fact remains they represented nothing but a concession granted by Germany—a concession that could be terminated at an instant's notice.

With due respect to the German ministry of information, all further news of what France has and has not decided to do will be placed immediately in the "Look Who's Talking" file and saved for the distant day when some of these things may be good for a chuckle.

The ne wprice for a home economics text book is $1.51, against the old price of $1.08. That in a sense, presents a home economics problem.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, May 18

SUNDAY'S horoscope indicates that there may be a state of much busting, excitement and stress but without any encouraging promise of success, achievement or satisfaction. Such disturbing influence affects all phases of life, with dangers and distresses to be manipulated along lines of least disfavor by sound sense and rigid self-control, fortitude and optimism. Tempest, strife, restless behavior would not prove constructive in any difficult situation. Public affairs are stressed.

Those whose birthday it is may find it constructive to have a definite and decisive recognition of responsibility and obligations when stress and storm seem to undermine the life and its foundations. Persistent efforts, sane and courageous attack of portentous problems, with fortitude, prudence and patience rather than despair or turbulence, may serve difficulties and trials into safe harbors, but self-control, calmness and balance are indispensable.

A child born on this day may require a careful education, both by training, precept and discipline, to build up its patience, fortitude and courage to meet life's trials and tribulations with philosophic calm. Impulsive and passionate indulgences would prove calamitous.

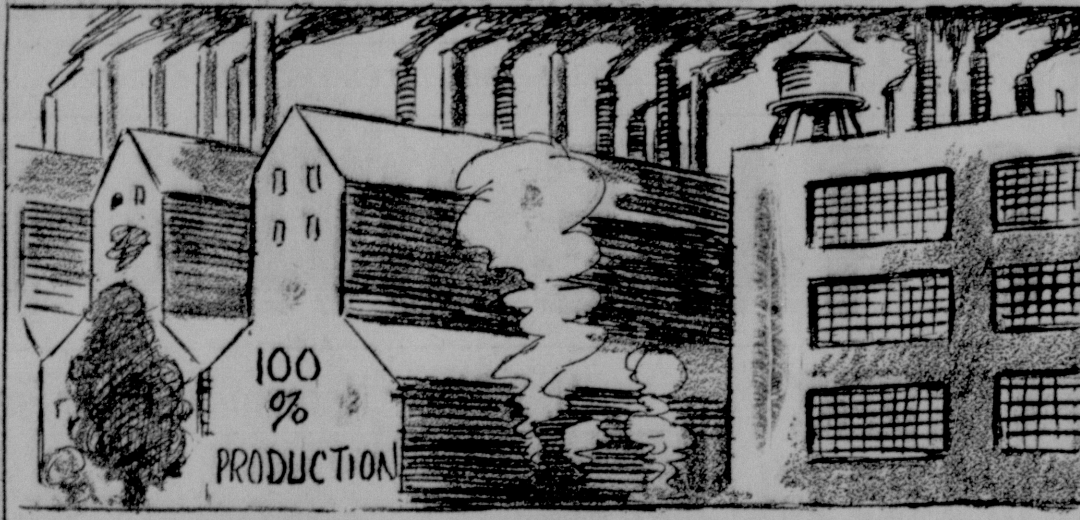

For Monday, May 19

Monday's astrological forecast should be for some measure of success in some unpromising situations in which writings, documents or other tricky state of affairs may spell loss and defeat. Funds as well as peace of mind are endangered, by carelessness or treachery, with elders or superiors antagonistic. With vigilance, conservatism and diplomacy there are many benefits in sight.

Those whose birthday it is may reap a successful and happy year by exercising much care with writings, documents and contracts as well as tact and consideration with superiors, elders or those in authority. Loss and trouble may be turned to success, expansion and good fortune by shrewd and sagacious effort.

A child born on this day may have fair success, if it keeps alert to treachery with documents and writings. It should avoid offending elders and superiors.

BIRTH RATE REPORTED DECLINING

Reduction 4 Per Cent To a Generation

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

We are beginning to get information from the last census that probably has as much medical significance as social significance. In the first place, our population is declining. If the present birth and death rates continue, the population of the United States will fail to maintain its numbers by approximately 4 per cent per generation. This is different from the 1930 record. If the birth and death rates which were operating in 1930 had continued, it would have resulted in an increase of population of about 11 per cent per generation.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

We are older than we were in 1930. The average median age of the population of the United States in 1940 was 28.9 years, whereas in 1930 it was 26.4 years. There are over 8,956,000 people 65 years of age in the United States, an increase of 35 per cent over the number in this age group in 1930.

There has been a steady increase in people in the upper age groups since 1890, at which time the median age was 21.4. This is an extremely important and serious consideration from every point of view. The cause of this increase in the upper age group in population is undoubtedly due to the improvement in the treatment of diseases of infancy and childhood and the reduction of infantile mortality. More people live to be old.

It means an increasingly large group of people who are likely to be dependent.

The Dependent Aged

About 20 per cent of people at the age of 65 are out of work and semi-dependent. Perhaps three-quarters of these are taken care of by their families. The rest are candidates for institutions maintained by the state. The incidence of mental disability after the age of 65 increases rapidly. Of course, the figures for those of the age of 70 to 75 indicate that even more are dependent. There is no indication that this condition is going to get better and the medical profession, as well as sociologists, must prepare to take care of this large aged population.

There was an increase in the urban population of five and a half million in 1940 over 1930. The actual figures are 74,423,702 people living in cities on April 1, 1940 and 57,245,573 living in the country. While there is a distinct medical aspect to a large urban population, the figures as given do not indicate that any particular change in our medical and social methods need be made at present.

It is really easier to handle sick people in the city than it is in the country.

Population Decline

The size of the average American family in 1940 was 3.8, whereas in 1930 it was 4.1. There has been a continuous decline in average population per family since 1890 when the figure was 4.9.

The total increase in population in the United States between 1930 and 1940 was 7.2, but there was an increase in the number of families of 16.3. This has some medical significance. Small families are easier to handle in the way of prevention of infectious diseases. The incidence of infectious diseases is not so great and it is much easier to control the nutrition of a small family than of a large family.

A most serious medical aspect of the census figures is the increase in the old and middle-aged population. This will undoubtedly mean that permanent, widespread social changes must be inaugurated and a large part of these have to do with medical and mental care of this rapidly increasing group.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

D. L.:—"What causes a person to yawn a lot and take a long breath like a sigh? I have been told I have no organic heart trouble."

Answer—This is quite a common symptom and often causes a good deal of worry, but so far as I know, it has no significance. It is certainly not a sign of heart trouble.

H. D. H.:—"In the continued use of water drawn from the hot water tap to make tea, coffee and boiled foods, is there danger of giving my family lead poisoning?"

Answer—Not unless the plumbing pipes are lead, which is extremely unlikely at the present time, as the plumbing profession has not used lead pipes for over fifty years.

W. W.:—"I would appreciate having you print the name given to a doctor who deals in injuries to arm and leg muscles."

Answer—There is no specialty associated particularly with injuries to the muscles of the arms and legs. Orthopedic surgeons deal with all sorts of injuries and possibly this could be included in the specialty of orthopedic surgery.

D. B.:—"Will you please tell in your column if, after years of use, there are harmful or habit-forming qualities in the following formula: Sodium acetyl-salicylate, calcium-sodium phosphates, sodium bicarbonate, sodium citrate?"

Answer—No. This is a simple mixture of aspirin with alkalis, which is good for functional headaches and indigestion; possibly for arthritis.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendenning has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, 235 E. 4th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

STRATHAM, N. H.—Retired barber, Nathan J. Wiggins, "The man who shaved the poet Whittier," once organized an exclusive tonorial society at Rye Beach, known as the John C. Whittier club. For a $5 fee members were privileged to be shaved with the same razor that grazed the poet's cheek.

Cold Winds

Someone has told of the bird of the far northland. On the wing, she was caught by a north wind of unusual power. Fighting hard, she still was swept far to sea. Resistance was unavailing. After long hours she came to a milder clime and to a country far better than the one from which she had been driven. Here she built her new home. This was a good land for any bird, with longer summers and fairer fields and finer feathered friends.

Jacob said, "All these things are against me." But they were not. They were the providence of God working for him, for the welfare of a nation, and for the accomplishment of the purpose of God.

So let us not be too hasty in our judgment of cold winds or cold and apparently calamitous happenings. The Lord would bring us to a better land than this and fairer one. He may have not only good purpose for our lives but good plans which He would consummate by our lives.

Remember, the south wind may drive us northward and perhaps into snow and ice. The cold north wind has better promise in it.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "In the illusion of life that is here today and gone tomorrow, man would be wholly mortal, were it not that Love, the divine Principle that obtains in divine Science, destroys all error and brings immortality to light" (p. 365).

Mooseheart Welcomes Largest Family and 33 Year Old Mother

Mooseheart recently welcomed 35-year-old Mrs. Audrie Nicholson and her 10 children to the Moose City of Childhood from the Cambridge, O., lodge. The family is the largest ever admitted to Mooseheart. Pictured above on the steps of the Mooseheart campsite

A 33-year old mother and her 10 children, ranging in age from two to 14, were admitted recently to Mooseheart, the largest family ever welcomed to the Moose City of Childhood.

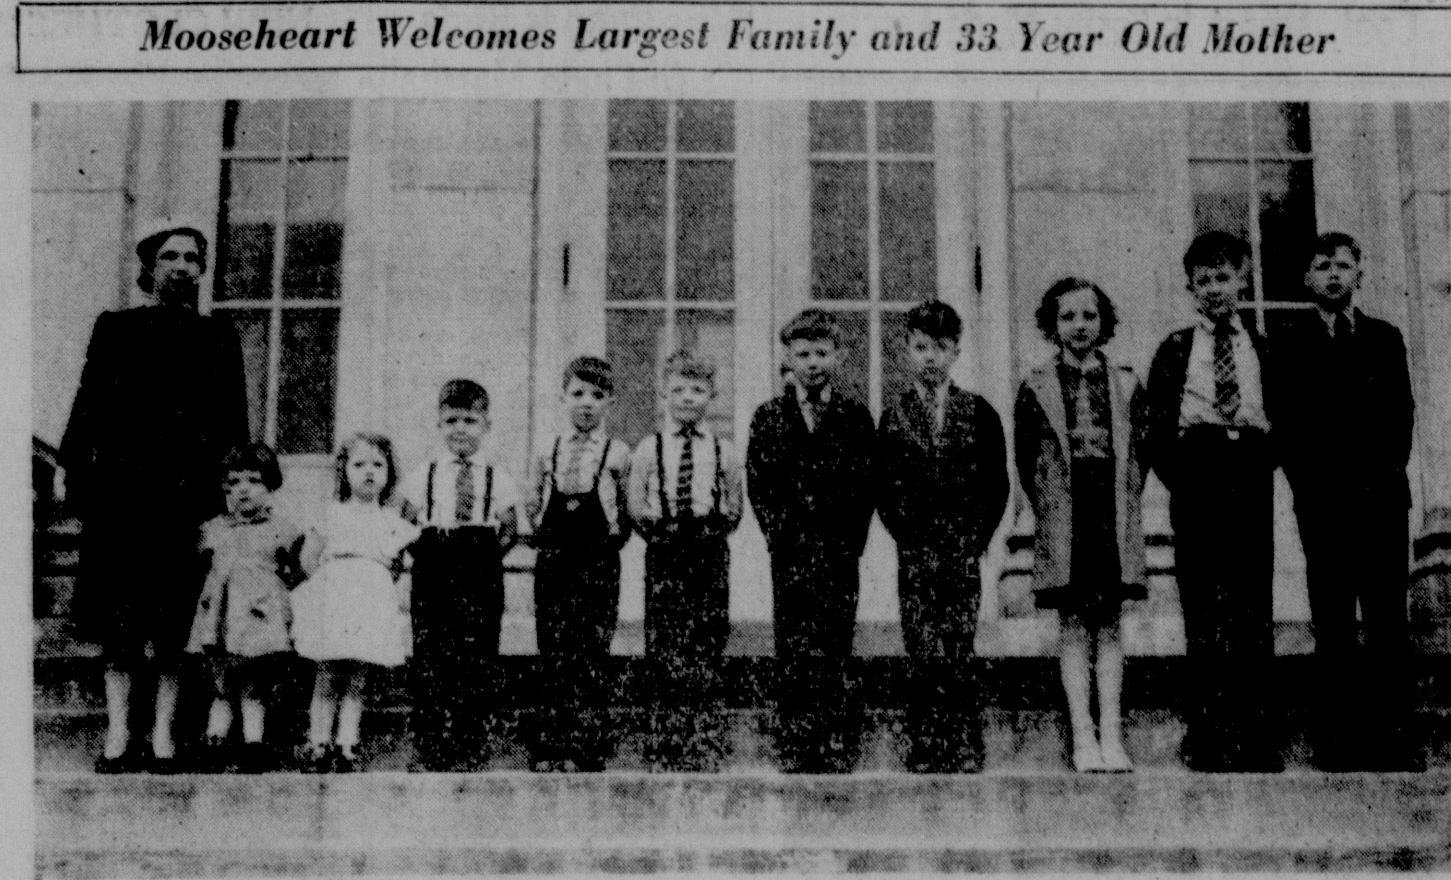

The mother, Mrs. Audrie Nicholson, a resident of Cambridge, O., lost her husband, Clyde William Nicholson, an automobile mechanic, Dec. 14, 1939, when he died of a heart ailment.

The widow turned to Cambridge Lodge No. 631 of the Loyal Order of Moose, in which her husband held membership, for help. The lodge responded and arrangements were made to take the entire family into the bosom of Mooseheart where the mother will become a matron at a cottage and her children will be reared, cared for and educated through high school, not only in the learning to be derived from books, but at a practical trade with which they may support themselves after graduation.

The fraternity will expend upon the late Mr. Nicholson's family close to $100,000 in the costs of rearing the 10 children and in their education through the years each will spend at the City of Childhood, according to Supt. W. J. Leinweber. Salem lodge No. 571 has been conducting an extensive membership drive under the direction of Lester W. Bloch, membership director of New York, working out of Mooseheart, and who has secured 70 new members in the past four weeks, making the total membership of the lodge 400.

Mr. Bloch is leaving the city today for Middletown, O., to open a campaign there.

Medical Dean Fears Paucity Of Doctors; Hits Draft Clause

CLEVELAND.—Dean Torald Sollmann of the Western Reserve university school of medicine believes that uncertainty over the selective service status of medical students constitutes a "very real danger" to both civil and military medical service in the United States.

Dr. Sollmann said that an uninterrupted supply of new and fully-trained physicians in civilian practice now is no larger than the needs. "An increase in the supply," he said, "cannot be provided for five or six years and a deficiency cannot be made good."

The intensive development of the defense program is making necessary the drawing of men from civilian practice. Unless the two problems are considered and planned jointly, one with reference to the other, it will create not only hardship, but very real danger to both of them.

Face Call In June

Dr. Sollmann noted that nearly half of the first and second year medical students at Reserve are registered and said that many of these are uncertain of the effects of the draft upon their careers.

While all students subject to the draft have been deferred until the end of the school year in June, Dr. Sollmann said that their subsequent status depends upon rulings of local boards and that these boards instructions for classification of medical students was not clear.

For those students listed in the medical reserve, Dr. Sollmann said there was the problem of their appointment to hospital staffs for additional training after completion of their one year active duty in the reserve.

Active service in the reserve is deferred until after interne work is completed.

"As the draft law stands at present," Dr. Sollmann said, "the responsibility of providing an uninterrupted supply of doctors to the community lies with the local boards. There is just as much responsibility for that as for sending a man to camp."

In selecting a funeral director, I suggest that you give careful consideration to his establishment, for the two or three days immediately prior to the services are very important.

A funeral home which is comfortable, roomy, and which has a warm and friendly homelike atmosphere, is a logical choice. The majority of people will find that the Stark Memorial meets these requirements in most fitting fashion. Callers are always welcome—so you may easily see for yourself whether I'm right about this matter!

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
The tourist season opened, bringing three liners a week to flood historic old Sitka with crowds of eager sight-seers; and Captain O'Moore's shipmaster friends, proud to show Alaskan hospitality at its best, invariably brought all their traveling notables to Echo House.

For Sandra, this meant almost daily entertaining; and the social tempo was further quickened when, one morning the squadron of the United States Navy bombers settled, like a flock of gigantic silver birds, among the little green islands in the bay.

Sitka hostesses filled a gala fortnight with social affairs for the flyers; but it was to Echo House that they came most often—in formality and at all hours.

Captain O'Moore, his leg now free of its cast, turned only the most jovial of countenances upon his guests and the world. But in his eyes of privacy, more and more often he frownedly perused the pages of his herring records. This season, fish were not appearing off-shore as they should; and when they did appear, cruising whales quickly chased them into more constricted waters where the O'Moore boat could not fish. So far, the fleet had managed to keep Starbuck's cannery fully supplied—but only through ceaseless effort.

Sandra, swept up in a whirlwind of gaiety, had almost forgotten the fishing business. Walking rather late the morning after the bombers had taken off for their base in the States, it came to her, with a twinge of remorse, that she hadn't even seen Kemp since the arrival of the squadron. At breakfast, when she mentioned it, her grandfather told her Kemp had put off two weeks ago to scout for inside fishing-grounds for his shallow seiners. Keda was in charge at the cannery.

Sandra had planned to spend a quiet day free from guests, but even before breakfast was over a sleek, gray destroyer came nosing in to the steamship dock. "The U. S. S. Pelley," her grandfather commented. "That's Ellsworth's command. I met him when he was stationed at Bremerton."

Commander Ellsworth promptly presented himself at Echo House, with word that his vessel's mission in Sitka was one of science rather than war. "I'm carrying a group of oceanographers from the Hydrographic Office, and a whole mess of modern equipment for the study of ocean currents," he explained over a cup of coffee. "My professors are beginning their work around Cape Edwidge and St. Lazaria Island. Knowing you have done a lot of local research along their lines, Captain, I wondered if you'd let them come up here today and look over your records?"

The Captain assented, heartily; and Sandra was soon greeting the group of scientists, and trying to conceal her surprise at their appearance. Instead of the graybeards she had expected, they were all rather young, alert, keen-faced men. And their leader, Mayes, was a forceful individual with an incisive manner of speech quite at variance with the dreamy personality commonly ascribed to men of science.

Throughout the day the group was in close conference over the O'Moore herring records. Working in pairs, with the Captain supplying a clarifying word here and there, they compiled their notes with machine-like precision. Though it was late afternoon when they finished, Mayes refused the Captain's invitation to remain for dinner.

"Thank you, sir. Immensely in your debt already," he said in his brisk, clipped fashion. "Hope to enjoy your hospitality later—return it, also. Bit pressed for time now—pushing on this evening to anchorage at St. Lazaria. Remain there some weeks. Perhaps you'll run out—Miss O'Moore, too. Glad to have you aboard, any time."

When they had gone, Sandra went in to find her grandfather absently rubbing a hand over the model of the Glory. There was a dispirited droop to his shoulders.

"Did you show Dr. Mayes your Alaskan charts, lamb?" she inquired.

He shook his head. "I mentioned them, but I could see he wasn't interested. Belike, even the War Department has lost interest in them. 'Tis weeks since I heard."

She slipped a comforting arm about his shoulders. "Don't be downhearted, darling. Maybe the very next boat will bring you a letter."

"Aye—maybe. And maybe I'm an old fool, who sees in me charts what no one else can." He reached out a hand and listlessly began twiddling the dials of his radio.

"I don't remember ever seeing them, lamb."

"They're nothing to look at—unless you're 'tink' to take a ship through those waters. Just copies on thin 'treen' linen."

"I'm sure there was nothing like that in the sea when I straightened it up. I—Dynamite!" She jerked up, startled by a sudden thought. "Do you suppose the safe-blowers stole—"

"No, darlin', I'd not trust me charts to that old iron box. Besides, I like to keep 'em always near. To look at sometimes . . . and remember. . . Belike, as Starbuck once said, that's all they're good for. Just relics, to—"

"Phooey for Kemp's opinion! He's not a sailor."

"No-o-o. Though I do be always forgettin' that, for some reason. The sea puts her mark on a man, and there's that about Starbuck—Well, no matter."

That evening at sunset, the Pelley left for St. Lazaria Island. Sandra, leaning from an arch in the cupola, watched the Navy greyhound nose out between the islands into the rose-gold west, but her thoughts were elsewhere. This was the first time she had come to the cupola since the night Jean Reynall had talked to her across the water. She had kept away purposely, avoiding the place as one instinctively avoids a spot where the pain of disillusion has shattered the beauty of a dream.

But this evening, with the house quiet for the first time in weeks, a strange loneliness had come upon her. She had felt the need to get away by herself, to think . . . to dream.

Since that morning when his leaped bits of cable had temporarily disabled the O'Moore fleet, she had had no word from Jean. Had not heard his name, nor spoken it aloud. Yet she had not been able to crowd him out of her mind. Always, she was conscious of him. But she felt him most poignantly when she looked down on the transformation he had wrought in the Glory of the West. For the old ship was no longer dingy, battered, darkly scrofulous; outwardly, in all save masts, she was again the counterpart of the shining white model on the Captain's table. At sight of her now, faintly flushed with sunset, Sandra was stirred anew by the grace of her snowy hull, and by the sheer beauty of her upcurving prow where, under a lengthened bowsprit, the golden mermaid pointed a way to adventure.

All that marked the Glory for a cannery was the day-and-night rumble of machinery in the hold. Sandra heard it now—steady, muffled, the heartbeat of a great industry.

The Baltic had come puffing in with its loaded scow at dinner-time, and still lay in its berth near the Glory. Sandra had thought it deserted until, suddenly, a man and a woman stepped out from the pilot-house—Reynall, and Liane Boottin.

During the past month Liane had kept away from Echo House, displaying a surprising indifference toward the personable young officers who came and went there. She seemed to have developed an absorbing interest in affairs of the waterfront, for she met the Baltic each time it came in, and she never failed to be on hand when the O'Moore fleet arrived to unload.

Now she and Reynall climbed down into the Indian canoe that lay alongside the Baltic. They both knelt in the bottom, native fashion, and swung their paddles with accustomed ease. The little craft came skimming down the channel spilling their laughter, until they were passing Echo House. There both of them looked up and waved to Sandra.

Sandra watched the canoe glide out on the bay where the twilight islands had already turned to purple velvet patches. When, finally, it was lost in the shadows, she was swept by a fierce nostalgia for something she could not name. She tried to think of other things, but her mind persisted in envisioning Liane and Reynall in the canoe; slipping along in island shadows, with air fresh on their faces—and his eyes only for her.

She had momentarily forgotten the "talking spot" when, startling her, Liane's petulant voice filled the cupola. "Oh, you never have time for anything I want you to do, Jean. Why can't we go out to the Place of Trees?"

"Because it would take all night to paddle out there and back, lady, and I must start back for Shaman's Lagoon within the hour," Reynall replied.

"Darn Shaman's Lagoon, and every fish in it! If you must rush back, why did you hustle me into this canoe when I had just snuggled down for a cozy chat aboard the Baltic?"

"What could be cozier than this, my little wicket? Relax now, and rest your paddle while we drift through between these two islands. I've always like this little spot—ever since I used to paddle out here as a boy."

Sandra held her breath. Was he going to tell Liane about the acoustical properties of the cupola, and how he used to talk to her, Sandra, when she was a little girl? "If he does, I'll murder him," she thought, savagely.

But there was no more talk. Only the sound of paddles laid athwart the canoe, and Reynall humming.

When Hot Days Come—How About This Spot?

Stormy weather—and how! A 40-mile-an-hour wind was blowing and drifting the snow when this picture was taken near the South Pole, on the Byrd Antarctic expedition. The picture, just released by the expedition which has returned to the U. S., is an official photograph of U. S. Antarctic Service.

Then his voice, deep, poignant, and not very loud, came intimately across the water:—

"Wild gees cry, flying high, Where silver spruce and hemlock lock sight.
The campfire's glow lifts high,
drops low.
My heart goes out to you."

Sandra's eyes filled with tears, and her heart with a wild, tender happiness. Their song! He had seen her in the cupola; had inveigled Liane into a canoe ride that would take him out to their secret "talking spot," so he could sing to her.

Suddenly the night seemed vibrant and glamorous with promise. She lifted her face and threw out her arms, feeling that she could embrace the whole wonderful world. (To be continued.)

Now we will go back one step further. You see a lot that takes your eye. The location is desirable and the price is right. Next you look at different style houses. Traded American League Players Increase Batting Averages

HERMAN, SUNDRA AND GUMBERT ALL IN BETTER FORM

Mediocre Batters Pep Up With New Uniforms and New Chances

By JUDSON BAILEY
Apparently the best tonic a baseball player can get is a new uniform. Time after time a trade has pepped up a player to performances he probably never would have reached at his old familiar stand.

This season has produced many examples—Billy Herman, who was hitting .194 for the Chicago Cubs and jumped to above .300 as soon as he joined the Brooklyn Dodgers; Steve Sundra, mediocre pitcher for the New York Yankees who has won four and lost one for the Washington Senators.

The latest exhibit is Harry Gumbert, the right hander whom the New York Giants traded Wednesday to the St. Louis Cardinals. In his last start with the Giants, he was knocked out of the box in the sixth inning by the Boston Braves. With the Redbirds yesterday he held these same Braves to six scattered hits, didn't walk a man, and shut them out, 4-0.

Pirates Stop Dodgers
While the Cardinals were winning, the Brooklyn Dodgers' seven game victory string was snapped by the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-2, in 11 innings. Elbie Fletcher, who had singled one run across earlier, hit a homer off former teammate Mack Brown in the 11th to decide it. This reduced the Dodgers' National League lead to 1½ games over the Cards.

The Giants took their second straight from the Chicago Cubs, 4-2, by punching out two runs in the eighth inning against Bill Lee. Mel Ott hit his eighth homer of the season in the second stanza.

Indians Win
The Cleveland Indians added to their margin in the American League by battering the Boston Red Sox, 9-3.

Joe McCarthy shook up his New York Yankee batting order, benching rookies Phil Rizzuto and Gerry Priddy, and managed to break the bombers' five-game losing streak at the expense of the Chicago White Sox, 6-5. Joe DiMaggio came out of his hitting slump with a homer in the third and a triple that set off the winning rally in the ninth. The latter blow was followed by a resounding three-bagger by Joe Gordon and a pinch single by Red Ruffing.

Full Two Double Plays
The Yankees had Gordon at second and little Frank Crosetti at shortstop and this season's pair pulled off two sparkling double-plays. Another veteran, Johnny Murphy, pitched three scoreless innings in relief after the Sox knocked out Marvin Bremer with five runs in the sixth.

A two-run homer by Rookie Pat Mullin in the sixth inning brought the Detroit Tigers a 5-4 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics, with Paul (Dizzy) Trout working four shutout frames in relief.

The Washington Senators edged out the St. Louis Browns, 7-6, as Elden Auker of the Browns lasted the full nine innings although giving up 16 hits. Mickey Vernon and Jim Bloodworth each made four. The modern record for hits off one pitcher in one game is 26.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ.
NEW YORK, May 17. — (The Special News Service)—Anton Christoforidis vs. Gus Lesnevich for the N. B. A. light-heavy title Thursday night is the next stop on Mike Jacobs' hit parade. . . . Fancy an N. B. A. championship bout in General Field's territory. . . . Some of the best informed minds around town think the Yanks have a deal of some sort cooking. . . . So the pulp can't take criticism? Well, the Rev. R. J. Quinn of Carroll, Iowa, has been issued a membership in the National Association of Semi-Pro Umpires. . . . Lew Jenkins has bought a new $800 motorcycle and swears he'll personally ride it this summer in the championship races.

Today's Guest Star
Gerry Horn, Boston Post: "The growing disrespect that rival baseball players are showing for the New York Yankees seems like treachery. . . . No one is afraid of them. . . . None of the teams tremble when they discover the Yanks are on their way to town. . . . The players do not doff their hats respectfully as the Yankees trot past and other American leaguers do not make any attempt to apologize for a stray double or triple."

Today's Sport Quiz
How can Bob Diefenthaler, Big Ten high jump champ from Illinois in 1939, be a private in the army and an officer in the navy at the same time? Answer a hundred words or so down. . . . Patriotism knows no boundaries. When they played the National Anthem at the stadium the other day, the customers on roof tops and on the subway platform outside the park whipped their hats off and stood at attention right along with the guys inside.

Must Be In the Blood
Canada Lee made $90,000 in the ring and wound up with four bits. Now, in the leading role in "Native Son," a Broadway hit, he just about has established himself as the top Negro actor of the time. . . . But Canada Lee says if he had to do it all over again, he would be a fighter.

Rounding 'em Up
A Cub fan has written in asking that organ music be played during the Wrigley field games. . . . Answer to sports quiz: Bob has been a draftee at Camp Shelby, Miss., since January. This week he received an engineering specialist's commission in the naval reserve, but red tape hasn't permitted him to leave the army yet. . . . Band Leader Phil Harris has bought the contract of Donnie Maes, Colorado 118-pounder, who looks like he has it.

Secrets of Cosmic Ray Are Disclosed By Famous Scientist, Prof. Compton

(By International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA—New secrets of cosmic rays, obtained in "flying laboratories," about 13 miles above the ground, were revealed by Prof. Arthur H. Compton, Nobel prize winner, at the American Philosophical society's annual meeting recently.

The world famous scientist of the University of Chicago presented photographs made in an airplane by his colleagues, Drs. G. Herzog and W. Bostick. Other high altitude observations were made in airplanes and balloons by Drs. V. C. Wilson, W. P. Jesse, M. Schein and E. O. Wollan. Powerful magnetic apparatus, capable of influencing the paths of the incoming electrical cosmic rays bullets, and counter tubes, were set up in the airplanes and balloons.

Prof. Compton said that observations were made as high as 20,000 meters, nearly 13 miles, above the sea level. There the air is very thin, since it is nearly the top of the atmosphere.

Nevertheless, even here, mesotrons were found in appreciable amounts. Mesotrons are newly discovered electrons of heavy weight.

Far Outweigh Electrons
Compared with the ordinary electrons, such as used in electric lamps, radio-tubes, television service, the heavy-weight particles, mesotrons may be a hundred times or more in weight.

No one has yet succeeded in producing these electrons in the laboratory. They are found, so far, only in cosmic rays which enter the atmosphere of the earth from outside celestial space.

Dr. Compton explained, that these heavy-weight electrons are produced by the change of the still heavier protons, and protons are the hearts of the hydrogen atoms. Thus, cosmic rays are protons, before they turn into mesotrons by colliding with the air.

The new investigations are expected to aid scientists in solving the final puzzle: from where do the cosmic rays protons come? As yet no one has an answer to this question.

Dr. W. M. Stanley, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, reported that the virus continues the ability to reproduce itself, although its surface be greatly altered.

Cause of Many Diseases
Viruses are the cause of many infectious diseases of man, animal and plant. They are smaller than the germs. In fact, Dr. Stanley said, the virus that causes mosaic rot disease in tobacco plant, is not a living thing, since its proteins have been crystallized.

Various substances, like the amino acids, were yoked to tobacco mosaic virus particles. Some of these could be used as vaccines to prevent the disease in rabbits.

While such chemical yokings changed the effect of the virus in the living body, the virus particle continued to reproduce itself. The virus study is throwing new light upon the thin partition between living and nonliving, and upon many human diseases caused by these strange infectious bodies.

Dr. John H. Northrop, a colleague of Dr. Stanley, succeeded in preparing a crystalline diphtheria antitoxin; that is a new kind of substance for prevention and treatment of diphtheria. It consists of just the pure germ-fighting and poison-fighting "antibody" substances.

NAMPA, Ida.—At the annual pet show of the Nampa Boy Scouts, one of them presented his little brother. He said the youngster was the only "pet" the family had.

COUNTY RECEIVES CLAIM FROM STARK

LISBON, May 17.—Columbiana county's claim of an alleged $6,315.20 overpayment for child keep at the Fairmount Children's home, near Alliance, was acknowledged today when Auditor Lester Lash of Stark county sent a check for that amount to Ross Tisher, Columbiana county auditor.

The over-payment was for a period including Aug. 1, 1938, to Dec. 31, 1940, when this county paid on a 40 per cent basis, and Stark county contributed 60 per cent.

Columbiana county now pays on a per capita basis for child maintenance at the home. This covers around 32 per cent.

Bottleneck

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — Speaking of bottlenecks, two four-year-olds really created one at automobile parking lots.

Just to pass the time, they started to collect car keys and had 15 sets before they were detected.

Frightened by police, they would not tell where they got the keys. It took the law an hour to straighten things out.

Excited Father?

SPOKANE, Wash. — Maybe the person who tried to mail a postcard in a fire alarm box had a good excuse at that.

When firemen arrived, they found this note written to a Seattle address: "Baby girl born, weighs eight and a half pounds, is 21 inches long. I'm awful tired and cranky. Taking 2 o'clock bus."

Will Syria Become a Near East Battleground?

Following a Vichy government announcement of closer collaboration with the Axis, come reports of French fighter planes guiding German bombers through the French-mandated country of Syria. British Royal Air Force flyers were given stern orders to smash the Luftwaffe invaders on landing fields in both Syria and Iraq. Should the British and the Axis forces clash in Syria, the ancient city of Damascus, capital of the country, may become a battleground. Damascus is one of the holy cities of the Mohammedans, and here the pilgrims assemble on their journey to Mecca.

20-Year-Old Wife of Chief Is Mother; Births Are Premature

Edward Adams, 22, the father, was at work when a hospital attendant telephoned the news.

"No kidding?" was the only response. Then he dashed to the hospital.

"I feel weak," Adams gasped on his arrival. "We both wanted a multiple birth was not expected until Mrs. Adams underwent examination just prior to delivery."

Twenty minutes after delivery Mrs. Adams learned that she was the mother of quadruplets.

"I'd been hoping for a baby girl and instead I got four of them," she said with a smile. "Maybe we wished too hard for a girl."

Mrs. Adams, who married last November, is 5 feet, 2 inches tall and normally weighs 108 pounds. Neither she nor her husband could recall cases of multiple births in their families.

Quadruplet births occur only once in 650,000 to 700,000 cases, medical authorities said.

Jack Oakie, Alice Faye and John Payne, featured in "The Great American Broadcast", at the State Sunday through Tuesday.

Combining the best qualities of a musical comedy with the story of the development of radio, "The Great American Broadcast", at the State Theatre Sunday through Tuesday features Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne and Cesar Romero.

The first three are the trio that started in "Tin Pan Ally" some time ago. Mary Beth Hughes, James Newell, the Four Ink Spots, Wier Brothers, Nicholas Brothers, Wula Morgan, William Pawley and Lucien Littlefield are seen in supporting roles and specialty parts.

Some of the latest hit tunes are introduced in the picture, sung by Miss Faye, John Payne, Oakie and James Newell, who has achieved considerable success in radio.

Showing Wednesday and Thursday at the State is the dramatic "Adam Had Four Sons", featuring Ingrid Bergman and Warner Baxter. The film, based on a best-selling novel by Charles Bonner, also has in its cast Susan Hayward, Fay Wray, Helen Westley, Richard Denning, Johnny Downs and Robert Shaw.

Successor to the two early comedy successes is "Topper Returns" at the State Friday and Saturday. Joan Blondell has the role first portrayed by Constance Bennett, the lady who is killed and returns, visibly and invisibly, to put a mild little man, Mr. Cosmo Topper, in hot water. Roland Young is still Topper, Billie Burke is his wife, with Patsy Kelly, Carole Lan-is, Dennis O'Keefe, Eddie (Rochester) Anderson and George Zucco in the other parts.

The State's attraction tonight is "Reaching for the Sun", with Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew and Eddie Bracken. Sunday only the Grand will present: "Man-Made Monster", a thriller with Lon Chaney, Jr., Lionel Atwill, Anne Nagel, Frank Albertson and Samuel S. Hinds, in the story of a brilliant scientist who discovers a way to motivate and control human life by electricity, and "Fanny Hill", with Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo, Percy Moran, Fuzzy Knight, Lewis Howard and Walter Catlett, who find a weekend treasure hunt cruise turned into a search for a murderer.

Wednesday's pictures at the Grand will be "Mrs. Dynamite", featuring L. Carroll Nash, Robert Armstrong, Elizabeth Arden, Lloyd Nolan and Irene Hervey, and "Road Show", musical comedy with Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Charles Butterworth, Patsy Kelly, George Stone and Willie Best.

Showing Friday and Saturday at the Grand will be a western "Boss of Bullion City", with Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight and Nell O'Day; and "A Dangerous Game" with Richard Arlen, Andy Devine and Jeanne Kelly.

A double bill concludes at the Grand tonight: Charles Starrett's "The Pinto Kid" and "The Kid's Last Ride", with Ray Corrigan, John King and Max Terhune.
